Prevention is the most effective way to achieve great oral health. This means practicing good home dental care and seeing a professional twice a year for regular teeth cleanings and x-rays. Preventive care not only protects oral health, it also saves money.

Studies indicate that periodontal disease, or gum disease, affects as much as 75% of the U.S. population. Although some forms of gum disease are reversible, most cases require more intervention once they've reached later stages. This illustrates the importance of preventive oral maintenance: proactive health care prevents serious problems.

We hope you'll never face a serious oral health problem, but if you do, our dental benefits will protect you from paying the full cost that others would face.
